A well known college professor states that he considers Vinol a truly wonderful tonic and strength creator. He was himself overworked and run down to a critical point. A friend asked him to try Vinol. He did so, and is now enjoying perfect health, and its curative powers cannot be too

We recommend Vinol to build up and attengthen the run-down and over-worker, weak women, old people; delicate oblidren and convalescents In case anyone is not satisfied after taking one bottle, we always refund their money. This does not happen, often, however, because Vinol's per centage of cures is very high. Stone & Mercer, druggists, Charksburg, W.

As unexpectedly as it had begun the flow ceased. He put down the glass, found his handkerchief and mopped his dripping face. When able to see again he discovered the young women leaning against one of the showenses, weak with laughter, but at a safe re-warned by experience, he worked at the machine gingerly, finally producing a thin, spiritering trickle. Beaming with triumph, he looked up. "I think it's safe new," he suggested. "I seem to have it under control." Angle and Josle returned, torn by distrust, but unable to resist the fus-cination of the stranger in our village. And there's no denying the boy was good looking and a gentleman by birth and education. He had filled one glass and was tincturing it with sirup when he caught again that confiding smile of Josie's full upon him as the beams'of a noonday sun.

"Haven't we seen you at church, Mr.
Duncan?" she said prettily.

Duncan?" she said prettily.
"I think perhaps you may have," he conceded. "I have seen you both."
The second glass (for he was determined that Angle should not escape) took up all his attention for an instant. "Do you have to go, too?" he inquired out of this deep preoccupa-

"I mean do you attend regularly?"

"I mean do you attend regularly?"
he amended hastily.
"Oh, yes, of course," Josie simpered, accepting the glass he offered her.
"You make it a rule to go erery Sunday, don't you. Her Dancan?"

"Did you know there was a vacancy in the choir?" Angle asked, taking up her glass.

"Choir?"
"Yes," Josie chimed in: "we were hoping you'd join. I want you to aw-

"Oh, yes, indeed; they're all just dying to meet you."
"I'll have to write and ask," he said abstractedly. Why, what do you mean by that?" Josle's question struck him dumb with consternation. He made curious noises in his thront and fancied (as was quite possible) that they eyed him in a peculiar fastion. "It's—I mean—a little trouble with my threat," he managed to lie at length. "I must ask my physician if I may first."

"Oh I see," said Josie.

"Oh, I see," said Josie.
"But," he hasiened to change the subject, "you're not drinking, either of you. I sincerely hope it's not so very Angie replaced her glass, barely tasted. "Do you like it, Josie?"

To Josie's credit it must be admitted that she made a brave attempt to drink. But the mixture was undoubt-edly flat, stale and unprofitable. She sighed, put it back on the counter and rose to the emergency.

"Mine's perfectly lovely"—with a ravishing smile—"but it's not very

"I made them dry for you—thought you'd like 'em that way," he stam-mered. "Perhaps you'd like 'em bet-ter if I put a collar on 'em?" The chorus negatived this suggestion very promptly.

"Why don't you try a glass, Mr. Duncan?" Angle added with malice, slyly nudging Josie.

"I'm on the wagon—I mean, I don't dink at all," be said wretchedly, and was deeply grateful for the diversion afforded by the entrance of a third on such bases.

"Huh?" bleated Tracey, dumfound-

"Is there anything you wish to pur A violent emotion stirred in Tracey.

Sounds began to emainte from his heaving chest. "N-n-no, ma'am!" he breathed explosively.

Duncan bowed again, his face expressionless. "Then will you be good enough to excuse me?" He turned precisely and made his way back to the counter.

strong enchantment by the movement.
Tracey swung on his heel and lunged for the door. "What was it you wanted to ask

As the boy disappeared at a hard gallop his response floated back, "I fergit." me, Tracey?" Angle called after him.

"I'm afraid I must have frightened Duncan said inquiringly. "Oh, no; not at all," Josie reassured hlm. "He's just gone to tell every-body you're here." "Come. Josie; we've been here ever so long." Angle moved slowly toward the door, but Josie inclined to linger.

"Don't hurry, I beg of you," Duncan "Oh, we haven't hurried," she said,

"IT SERVES ME BIGHT," HE CONCLUDED tled the man. "You'll remember what said about the choir, won't you? He braced himself to take advan-tage of the opening. "I shall never forget it," he said impressively.

She gave him her hand. "Then good-"Not goodby, I trust?" He retained the hand, despising himself inexpressi-

"Oh, we'll be in again, won't we, Angle?"

"Oh, yes, indeed!" "My land, Angle! What do you think? I'd almost forgotten to pay for the sodn!" "Please don't speak of it, Miss Lock-"But I must, Mr. Duncan. How much is it?"

Josle fingered the contents of her purse expectantly, but Duncan hung in the wind. He had no least botton what might be the price of soda water. "Two for a quarter," he hazarded, with his disarming grin.

Angle choked with appreciation of this exquisite sally. "Ain't you fun-

"I'm afraid you're right," he conceded. "Still, I'd rather you didn't

"It's 10 cents, isn't it, Mr. Duncan?" Josie was offering him a dime. He "Thank you very much," said he.

"Good afternoon, ladies."
He was aware of Angle's fluttering farewells on the sidewalk. Josie was lingering on the doorstep in an agony of untrained coquety. He lowered his tone for her benefit, thereby add-ing new weight to his bombardment of her amateur defenses.

"Remember you promised to call gnin." Her giggles tore his eardrums. "Th-thank you. I'm sure," she stam-mered and fied.

They disappeared. He wandered to the chair and threw himself limply, into it. "That voice," he said stupid-ly. "That giggle! I've got to woo and win that! It serves me right," he concluded. The most hopeless of humors assafled him, and he yielded to it without a struggle. His attitude expressed his mood with relentiess verily. Chin sunken upon his breast, eyes fairly distilling gloom, legs stretched
